Bell Tower Erected at the Steadman House

A donation from the Bartlett and Buffan Families enabled the Historical Society to erect a tower at the rear of the Steadman House to display the bells that have been donated over the years. Volunteers gave their time, labor and materials to make this a reality.

Historic Markers in Marcellus

The Historical Society received a grant in 2008 from the William G. Pomeroy Foundation to purchase two new roadside Historic Markers: one for the Steadman House on North Street and the other for the site of the Plaster Mill in Marcellus Falls.

The cast aluminum markers were made by Catskill Castings of Bloomville, New York and were received in March of 2009 but installation was delayed due to the approval process required by the New York State DOT. The Village Highway Department installed the Steadman House marker and the Town Highway Department installed the Plaster Mill marker.

A history of the Steadman House was featured in the Fall 2006 issue of the Newsletter and a story on the Plaster Mill was in the Winter 2002 Newsletter - both of which are available at the Steadman House and on the Historical Society website: mhs.marcellusny.com.

This year the Olde Home Days Committee paid to have the existing Historic Markers in the village repainted. The Village Highway Department handled the removal and remounting of the markers.

According to the New York State Museum web site: "The State Historic Marker Program began in 1926 as a program of the State Education Department to commemorate the Sequicentennial of the American Revolution. Over 2,800 of the small, cast iron site markers were erected statewide during the duration of this program (1926-1966)." ~

FOURTH PAPER

Marcellus was township number nine, of the Military Tract, there being twenty-six in all, and also one of the eleven towns formed at the organization of the county in 1794. It then comprehended all of the townships of Marcellus and Camillus and all of the Onondaga and Salt Springs Reservation west of the Onondaga Lake and Creek. The original township was irregular in form, a portion of it extending along the south line of Onondaga, called the Marcellus L., until it met a corresponding portion of Pompey, called Pompey L. The Pompey L. now constitutes a part of Lafayette; and the Marcellus L., a part of Otisco. Subsequently the town of Skaneateles was set off by itself; and at the same time the southern part of Marcellus was given to Spafford so that the present town of Marcellus contains but about thirty lots of the original one hundred in the township, or about one-tenth of the original town, as at first set off.

The town is regular in its boundary, rectangular in shape, the length being about twice the width. Its surface is a rolling upland, broken by the valley of the Nine Mile Creek which is the outlet of Otisco Lake and extends from south to north nearly through the center of the town. At some places the declivities that border the Creek are quite steep and 200 and more feet high. This Creek in many places is very crooked or serpentine and takes its name not from the length for it is nearly twenty miles long, but from the current saying, which was a fact, that from the point where the old Genesee road crossed the Onondaga Creek to this creek, in this village, was about nine miles, hence the expression, "Nine Mile Creek" as given to travelers when on their way westward through Onondaga Valley.

It has several falls on it and affords excellent facilities for water power. The early pioneers found the hills or uplands covered with heavy hard timber with very little underbrush but the valleys or low lands were covered with a dense growth of hemlock and thick underbrush which was a formidable obstacle to the clearing of the land and rendering it fit for cultivation. Hence we find the first settlements were made on the hills rather than in the valleys and that the East and West hills were occupied a year or more before any one located in the valley, where the village now is. While those who soon after located in the valley were considered unwise, their foresight proved superior in judging that the valley from the water privileges would ere long become the center of business. The first settler was William Cobb of Shaftsbury Vt., grandfather of the late Stephen Cobb, who located in 1791 on East Hill on the place now occupied by Chauncey P. Cornish. Col. Bigelow Lawrence also of Shaftsbury Vt., moved about the same time onto West Hill and occupied the place where J. D. Share now lives.

He had eight sons whom he soon settled, four on East Hill and four on West Hill, all within sight of each other, it is said. The four who located on East Hill were Rufus, Joab, Peter and Levi. Rufus settled on the Widow Brinkerhoff place, Joab on the D.D.F. Coon place, Peter on the corner a little west, near Elbert Corville's and Levi on the Morris place, still farther west. Those on West Hill were Calvin, Bigelow, jr., Dorastus and Jephtha. Calvin who settled on the place now occupied by Fred Pierce, in a log house opposite the present residence, Bigelow, jr., on the corner of the town line road and where Michael Mulroy lives, Dorastus on the place where Robert Gray lives, and Jephtha near by, but, we know not on what place. About the same time Cyrus Holcolm settled on the Skaneateles road on the place recently bought by Thomas F. Walsh and two families by the name of Bowen and one by the name of Cody settled near Clintonville, and Samuel Tyler in Tyler Hollow, whence the name. A family by the name of Conklin and one or two others settled the same year in the southern part of the town. Samuel Wheadon settled on South Hill as early as 1800 on a part of the farm now occupied by Andrew Merrill. A short time afterward Josiah Frost settled on the A. Armstrong place, Philo Godard on the John McNally place, Nathan Healy on the Wyle place, and Enoch Cowles on the Woodford place.

Not long after the first settlers on East Hill there came Caleb Todd, Nathaniel Hillyer, father of Chester Hillyer, and Richard May, great uncle of R. B. May, and located there, the latter upon the place where A. G. Weaver now lives, and a little later came Martin Godard, who located on the Henry Coville place, Terrence Edson, Reuben Dorchester, grandfather of Robert E. Dorchester, who located on the place where N. B. Crysler now resides. Mr. Dorchester had a harness and saddle shop near D. F. Mosiere's place where he carried on business many years and was succeeded by his son, Ellakim, who also carried on the same business successfully for many years more, of whom Thomas Kelly learned his trade and followed him in the same employment. William F. Bangs, father of the late Dr. Bangs and his sister, Mrs. Julia Kennedy of Syracuse still living, also came about the same time. Those later settlers purchased farms that had been previously occupied. ~
