From The President ...

What a great old fashion summer we are having! Thank you Charlie Sanborn for doing the work around the flag pole with the brick and slate. It looks great!

In June we had 7th grade classes in to learn about the society and do volunteer work. The high school students came for earth day and did a wonderful job raking and taking the debris to the curb for pick up. The 4th grade classes toured the house and learned about Marcellus history. Thank you Pat, Charlie, Jean and Amy for being tour guides.

Open House during Olde Home Days was a success. Pat and Charlie did a super job designing and putting our 50th Anniversary float together. Thanks to them and also to Bruce, Mary and Jamie for riding on the float. To all our volunteers: Doug and Jean Nightingale, Pat and Charlie Sanborn, Bruce and Mary Widger, Joy Buffan, Jamie Johnston, Cathy North, Hollis Abbott and Amy North - a big Thank You, I couldn't have done it without you.

The Society has made a flower garden in back of the house and placed a bench in memory of Alma B. Steadman. The month of July flew by with tours of the house, requests for family history research and many donations of artifacts.

Thank you to the Village Highway Dept. for your help with the flag pole, memorial garden, and transporting artifacts. We appreciate all you do for us.

Many of you already know that our large sign in the front of the house was vandalized and damaged beyond repair. Thank you to Syracuse Blueprint Co. for donating a new sign. Others have donated money toward the sign and that money will be used to repair and replace the lighting that was also destroyed. A young fourth grader that visited the house in June approached me and wanted to know if she could do a bottle drive to help raise money for a new sign. I was very touched by this and all the people that responded. What a wonderful Village and Town we live in!

WOOLEN CLOTH - Marcellus' Leading Industry

Cloth is such a basic necessity that in the early days of the United States small manufacturing units sprang up in many communities in order to exploit the newly invented machines that were replacing the spinning-wheel and the hand-loom.

The first woolen establishment in Marcellus was built on the site of the present upper mill by Robert and Thomas Dyer about 1812. Nine Mile Creek furnished the power.

Four years later the plant was sold to John Rhoades and Bishop N. Parsons. After changes of management, the company became Meachan and Parsons.

In 1847 the mill burned down. In the following year Mr. Meachan built the present plant, using brick. The company continued unsuccessfully for awhile and was then purchased by a group who began the manufacture of linen cloth after installing new equipment. Horace Greeley was a prominent stockholder in this venture, which failed in a short time.

In 1855 Chester Moses, James Fitton and James C. Sayre converted the mill back to woollens. During this period a great deal of cloth was supplied to the Union armies in the Civil War. After the death of Chester Moses, his son Lucius carried on, and in 1886 the Marcellus Woolen Mills Company was formed, which continued to 1890 when the organization joined the Crown Mills Corporation.

The original lower mill at the north end of the village was erected at the order of J. C. Sayre in 1878. It passed into the hands of S. W. Barker, who organized the Crown Mills Company.

Edward Moir assumed charge in 1884 and became president in 1890. The two mills were merged under the name Crown Mills Corporation at this time. He took an ardent interest in the wool tariff and in particular, the struggle of the carded woolen mills against the more powerful worsted section of the industry in regard to tariff inequities.

John M. Moir continued in his father's place after the latter's death in 1932. He has made numerous improvements in his 65 years in the business. Under his direction the company came through the Depression without a major shutdown.

Crown Woolen Mills Corp. makes a great variety of carded woolen materials which are used both for men's wear and women's wear including such clothing manufacturers as Hart, Shaffner, and Marx in the men's wear field and Best & Co. for women's wear with about 75% devoted to men's wear.

The mill and office presently employs about 175 people, all local residents.

The mill is now 100% electrically driven with steam being used in dyeing processes and for heat.

The cloth manufactured at Crown Woolen Mills is made from wool, or wool blended with natural or synthetic fibers. The wool comes from many parts of the world, each type being suitable for a specific end-product. The principal sources are Australia, New Zealand, several South American nations, Canada and the United States.

Next the different colors of fiber are blended. At the same time an oil emulsion is applied to make the fibers more elastic and workable.

The blended wool is then carded, by passing through a series of revolving cylinders covered with wire teeth. The product that emerges is called roving, which is yarn without twist.

The roving is spun into yarn on two different kinds of machines that accomplish the same end – mules and frames. At this stage twist is added to make the yarn strong.

Half of all yarn produced constitutes the warps of fabrics and half, the welt or filling.

In the warping process, the yarn is wound in pre-determined patterns onto the loom-beans, which in turn are attached to the looms.

The cloth is woven (on 68 automatic looms) automatically, meaning that new bobbins are continually fed into the shuttles without stoppage of the machines.

In burling, knots are pulled from face to back of the cloth by hand. Sewers repair imperfections by hand.

The fulling process shrinks the cloth and makes it softer.

After the final operations of shearing and pressing, the fabric is inspected.

*Note: The Lower Crown Mill was closed in 1961 (see Marcellus Observer October 12, 1961).
The Upper Mill had closed in 1955.*

MCS Yearbooks

The Historical Society has a collection of Marcellians but we are missing many years: prior to 1930, some 1970s, most of the 1980s, all of the 1990s and 2007. We accept donations of all years and sell any that we have an excess of for $5 each to benefit the Society.
